SCHOOL REPORT

Whole number of scholars,	447
Total length of schools,	28 weeks

Fellow Citizens of Falmouth :

In attempting to present an outline of our work in the several schools the past year, I find much to commend, and, as perfection is never attained, some to regret. Regarded as a whole, I think the work done compares favorably with other years. The introduction of the new Geography and Grammar begun last year has been completed the present year. The "Course of Study" adopted last year by the School Board has proved to embrace more work than can be thoroughly and successfully accomplished in our ungraded schools in the time specified, more especially as the new books introduced are much more comprehensive than the ones' displaced. Circumstances beyond the control of your committee have prevented the changes that seem necessary to make the course outlined the complete success we look for. From the fact that no limit to the amount of work to be done in the new works on Geography and Language within the year, has been established, and some other obstacles, a written test to compare the work of the several schools with fairness to teachers and pupils was found impracticable and had to be abandoned. Our school year has been shortened by the opening of schools which were suspended last year. The same teachers were employed as far as possible, and the most satisfactory work has been accomplished, as a rule, where no change has been made. We hear the remark, "As is the teacher so is the school," and I wish to say in justice to our teachers who work hard to raise the standard of their respective schools, morally as well as intellectually, that the best teacher with the best school appliances, under the best supervision, cannot teach a good school unless she has pupils whose parents have a high appreciation of education, and teach their children that it is a most desirable thing, a pearl of great price, a key by which success may be attained, and a source of continual happiness. The interest, life, enthusiasm, upon which so much depends, cannot be sustained, even if awakened, in schools, unless every member is in his class at each recitation.

If we seek to know the true condition of any school, we shall find that its work, in a very large measure, depends upon the attitude of the people toward the school. With the weight of responsibility of the education of children so divided between parent and teacher, is not a thorough understanding and hearty co-operation of the highest importance? Parents, with the aid of your friendly counsel, confidence and respect, the teacher is almost sure of a glorious success. Without this support she is working against odds which many have not the power to overcome.

The teacher's position is a responsible, dignified and useful, though not always an enviable one; and failure in any part of the school work is, or may be to the discredit of the teacher, but to your children it may be a loss beyond any power to estimate.

If you wish the best possible service a teacher can render, assure her of your confidence and esteem, and if the elements of a good instructor of youth are not lacking, you will receive a hearty response.

The school in No. 9 opened in the fall with fifteen scholars and has given the most satisfactory results. The school room was renovated and much credit is due to the parents and teacher who have caused it to be one of the most bright and cheerful rooms in town. The teacher and scholars in No. 8 have started a reference library of fifteen volumes, which may be a nucleus for future additions. Through the efforts of the pupils and the generous response of parents and friends, the school house in No. 3 has been provided with a fine bell, which is enjoyed by old and young alike. Let the good work continue, and in any case that has seemed to come short of a just demand, let us diligently inquire of ourselves, "Have I, as parent, as teacher, as superintendent, as a friend of education and a loyal citizen, faithfully performed the duties devolving upon me"? Then we may criticise justly rather than harshly. Thanking the many whose kind words and suggestions have often encouraged us in our work, I leave these thoughts for your consideration.

Respectfully submitted,

HENRY J. MERRILL,

FALMOUTH, Feb. 15, 1897.
