AUDITOR'S REPORT.

I have examined the original bills for which Town Orders have been drawn; the record of Orders kept by the Selectmen, and the stubs of the Order book, and they all agree. I have also examined the Town Treasurer's accounts and find them correct with receipts for all the money he has paid; and the Orders paid agree exactly with the stubs in the Order book and the Selectmen's record.

SILAS SKILLIN, AUDITOR.

SCHOOL REPORT.

FELLOW CITIZENS:

Another school year has passed and we respectfully submit our annual report of the condition and progress of our schools. It affords us much satisfaction to be able to report more than the usual degree of success for the year now closing. This is due in a measure to the good feeling existing between teachers and scholars; and in a larger measure to the employment of competent and experienced teachers.

When we visit a school we can soon ascertain whether the pupils are trying to assist their teacher or whether they intend to annoy him. If the former is desired, the scholars will be studious so that when they are called out to recite they can answer their questions promptly; if the latter, you may notice some scholars, in the rear of the room, performing some amusing trick to amuse the other scholars.

An improvement in discipline has been observed in most of our schools since the law was passed requiring towns to furnish text-books. Much of the disorder occasioned by pupils sitting together to study has disappeared from our schools.

We do not wish to be understood that we see no imperfections in our schools. We observe many ways in which they might be improved. Some of our teachers use the topical method in recitations. Each pupil is assigned some topic and he is expected to give what information he can without any further questions from his teacher. We do not think this method could be used profitably in all branches of study, but, in our opinion, it would generally tend to give more thorough training. When questions are used they often include three-fourths of the answers to them. Therefore we would recommend a more general usage of the topical method by our teachers.

The habit of illustrating the difficult points in a lesson should be cultivated by our teachers. When some illustration outside of the text-book is brought into a recitation, the hard points are more readily grasped by the pupils.

The matter of "A Course of Study for the Ungraded Schools" is being discussed by prominent educators at the present time. While we are not prepared to say that it can be successfully carried out in our schools, we think it is a matter worthy of our consideration. In the past, scholars have chosen their studies to quite an extent. Often they have left the common branches of education before they were thoroughly mastered to take up higher branches of study.

In closing we would urge you to take a renewed interest in our schools, believing that much of their future progress will depend upon the thought you bestow upon them.
